ECE Latin Summer Assignment

- June 28-July 4Relax this week and recover from your finals. Drink lots of water. Get plenty of sleep. Go outside, frolic, and do something fun with your friends. Help your parents around the house. Binge something on Netflix, or Hulu, or Prime.
- July 5-11 Get a copy of Ovid's Metamorphoses, translated by A.D. Melville. ($6.99 paperback on Amazon--or check the library) Read the introduction (but not too deeply: it's 37 pages long, so just skim it for overall information). If you don't already wear reading glasses, wear some fake ones. It will make you feel like a scholar.
- July 12-18 Read Book I. Pay special attention to The Creation, Ages of Man, and Apollo and Daphne, and fill out the study questions I. Sit under a tree while you read; it will make you feel more Roman.
- July 19-25Find a summary of Book II, and read it... or just read the whole translation text of Book II. Read the translation of Book III, paying attention to Narcissus and Echo.
Fill out the study questions II. Sit in an empty room and read aloud for effect.
- July 26-Aug 1 Read the translation of Book IV and fill out the study questions III. Re-read Pyramus and Thisbe. Find a copy of the movie "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and watch the scene--near the end of the movie--with Kevin Kline, and enjoy with popcorn and rootbeer. Watch the whole movie if you're feeling adventurous.
- Aug 2-8 Read the translations of Books V, VI, & VII. Or don't. These are up to you. But actually, you need to read Book VIII and fill out the study questions IV. Pay attention to Daedalus & Icarus, and Philemon & Baucis; actually, make artistic impressions of these stories in your chosen art form. Take pictures and post on your favorite social media with #ECCELatin.
- Aug 9-15 Read Book IX, then watch Hercules. Pretty different, eh? Then read Book X and fill out study questions V. Keep tissues nearby (Spoiler alert!) to mourn the death and re-death of Eurydice.
- Aug 16-22 Skip Book XI. I dare you... Read Books XII-XIII, just to get a new understanding of the Trojan War. Get a nerf sword and read while pretending to be your favorite hero from the war.
- Aug 23-30 Re-read, and make sure you mark the place of the following stories: Apollo & Daphne, Narcissus & Echo, Pyramus & Thisbe, Daedalus & Icarus, Philemon & Baucis, Orpheus & Eurydice, Pygmalion.

Congratulations! You finished your summer reading! Make sure you have your study questions completed and organized, as they are due on the first day of classes.
